There's always something to do on the farm! Many farmers struggle with the perpetual job of organizing, tracking and following through on the long list of tasks and projects that they could be doing, much less the things that must be done. Whether you are a beginning or seasoned farmer, join Chris Blanchard for a look at ways to overcome the overload of information, tasks and projects that await you each day, week and season. Chris has spent years of trialing a host of tools to reach some common strategies that shape time and information management in both the field and the office. The short course will offer practical examples and applications to life on the modern farm. Participants in this workshop will be provided with tools and begin to develop time management systems relevant to their own farm situation. Strategies discussed will improve your business and maximize your quality of life.

Chris Blanchard owns and operates Rock Spring Farm, a 12-acre organic market farm north of Decorah, Iowa, selling a wide variety of vegetables and herbs through a 200-member CSA, food stores and a farmers' market since 1999.
